Josh Levs
Author of "All In";
Former Reporter for CNN and NPR;
UN Women Champion of Gender Equality

Josh Levs is a leading expert on issues facing modern families. A former reporter for CNN and NPR, he is author of All In: How Our Work-First Culture Fails Dads, Families, and Businesses--And How We Can Fix It Together. The book has won rave reviews worldwide. New York Times columnist Charles M. Blow called it "fantastic;" the Washington Post's Brigid Schulte called it a "must read;" the Chicago Tribune called it "fascinating," and Forbes asked in a headline, "Can This Man Get Corporate America To Rethink An Anti-Dad Culture?" The Financial Times named Levs one of the top 10 male feminists, and U.N. Women declared him a Champion of Gender Equality.

After his daughter's birth, Levs launched a legal case for fair parental leave. As a result, one of the world's largest corporations revolutionized its policy, making it much better for men and women. Numerous other corporations have followed suit. In a front-page story, the New York Times called Levs "a pioneer of sorts."

A keynote and motivational speaker, Levs has been invited to speak at some of the world's most prestigious institutions including the Oxford Student Union, at which he won a debate.

As a journalist, Levs has received many of the highest honors in journalism, including six Peabody Awards and two Edward R. Murrow Awards. A scholarship was awarded in his name at his alma mater, Yale University. He lives in Atlanta with his wife and three children. More information at joshlevs.com.